Mr. Fennell, manager of the hotel, extinguished the light in the office about 6:45, thinking there was no need of keeping it burning. But Mr. Fennel found he could not see to transact bisiness, and at once re-lighted the 1 cmp, carelessly dropping the lighted macth behind the counter. He turned his attention to extinguishing the flames. With the assistance of a few bystanders, a bucket brigade was formed and the fire was soon under control. An addition, almost as large as the original structure has but recently been built on the south end of the hotel The only way to account for the blaze is that the match ignited paper or other inflammable material that had been saturated with the oil. Thus the blaze was conveyed to the can and the explosion followed.

Mill Race Overflows.

Last night a thick coat of ice formed over the screen that prevents all dirt etc. from entering the large water wheel at the Salem Woolen mills. This blocked the passage of the water through the race and the water naturally overflowed its banks and flooded and Fourteenth streets and Ferry and Mill streets. Owing to the intensely cold weather the water froze almost immediately and this morning that part of Salem presented an appearance similar to that of a frozen lake It was with considerable difficulty this morning that the Salem Consoliwere operated over the depot line since the track for about 150 yards
